Dr. Nancy Jack Receives Awards

Dr. Nancy Jack, assistant professor in Animal Science, received the Jack Justus Award for Teaching Excellence and the John W. White Award for Outstanding Teaching for 2007 from Dale Bumper’s College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Jack, who joined the Animal Science faculty in 2000, is director of the D.E. King Equine Program.
Equine science, offered as a minor in Animal Science, prepares students for jobs in the equine industry and is available to all students within the university. Students study equine genetics, nutrition, anatomy and physiology, health care, behavior and training, as well as legal issues and merchandising in the equine industry. Two student-managed public events, The Horse Festival and Razorback Roundup Auction, are held annually at the Pauline Whitaker Animal Science Center, north of the UA campus on Hwy112 S.
